FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1862.

PRESIDENT MITRE AND THE PETITIONERS.

NOTHING has ever so signally evinced the wisdom of our Government as the refusal to join in an imaginary South American alliance. The relations of this republic with Europe are to diffe rent from those of Peru, &c.; the large proportion of resident foreigners, so identified with our national progress; the historical traditions of Buenos Ayres, so complete with friendly sympathies and assistance, that it would afford a bad specimen of Argentine policy and gratitude, to endorse the covert declaration of hostility to foreign powers.

Meantime some of our colleagues are so wrong-headed as to condemn this wise act of our National Cabinet; and the Nacional has the temerity to assume the leadership of the mediocracy and cry out that "American is in danger!" It is characteristic of shallow intellects to note effects without being able to trace the causes, and such publications as the Tribuna and its vesper echo pander to the passions of the canaille, by exclaiming that President Mitre has falsified national sentiment, to the peril of the continent. Truly, America is in danger, not from any pernicious policy of our Ministers, but from the insane dogmas of a pseudo-liberal Press. There is, of course, a large section of our community in favour of the League—some from conscientious patriotism, a few from enthusiastic fraternity, but the majority animated by a jealous distrust of foreigners. Our enemies of America are not Europeans, but those Americans themselves who preach a crusade against stable governments, by wishing to exalt the breath of faction over the voice of the constituted legislature.

Not many days ago we were charged with insulting the country, because we deprecated the remissness of alcaldes and camp-judges; but how can we sufficiently expose to the indignation of all loyal citizens the gross contempt thrown upon the Argentine Republic in the person of its illustrious President, by those journalists who got up a petition to the Peruvian Envoy openly rambling on the Government despatch of Dr. Elizalde and requesting the Cabinet as traitors to prosecute. We are indeed champions of press-freedom, but the pen would drop from our fingers ere we should paint the revision of the Republic in so imperfect a light as our native friends have done.

The reason advanced by Dr. Elizalde for refusing to enter into the Guerrino alliance are in themselves right. The object is beyond the views of B. Ayres, the condition self-foreground, the occasion inopportune. What has B. Ayres to fear from foreign states, or gain by such an alliance? Nothing! then the idea is mythical and unworthy of acceptance. What is the condition of universal citizenship or equal rights? If it means to give Peruvians all the rights of native Argentines, this is unconstitutional and abdicating our independence; if it means simple civil rights, these are conceded to all foreigners without any invidious distinction —in either sense the primary condition is absurd. What is the happy moment chosen for this anti-European fraternity? The very day when we have to announce the arrival of a new railway Co. to Chascomus, of a new English Bank with £500,000 capital to develop our industry, and a dispatch from the Manchester Cotton Association promising us cotton machines &c. for the growth of cotton in our idle pampas. Cette, the object and conditions of the League are unsuitable, but the occasion is peculiarly unhappy, and affords, in itself, abundant reason for refusal.

If our colleagues could see the error of their ways, and expend ink and paper rather to cry down camp assassins, and call for efficient magistrates, than to foster ill-feeling towards the new Government about Peruvian politics if the Tribuna would confine its attention to the Guardia Monte without counting how many forestieri were slain in Gauchopolis, the Nacional would rivet its gaze on the muddy reaks to Palermo and Barracas, instead of proposing to build a thousand Argentine frigates to protect Patagonia from "bandit" emigrants; if the Sigh will give up speculating on the effects of Lynch-law in California and try to prevent horse-stealing—we promise them more solid benefits to the country, a better reputation for themselves and a hand of good fellowship from a generous enemy, whose only aim is the protection of British residents and advancement of the Argentine Republic.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

To haul down the colours of an insulting journal is a triumph which has been reserved for the STANDARD. The cringing politeness of the Tribuna, in yesterday morning's number—the audacity of that paper in trying to side with us, in our victory over the Buenos Ayrean "Chitty," Mr. Agrelo, and persuade the public that the cringe was the effect of fear,—this is what we call insufferable impertinence. We have nothing in common with that paper, and prefer to keep at arm's length from the Calle Venezuela, abajo.

But if the Tribuna has acted in as technically called "caved in," with the Casa de Moneda his followed suit. We hear that the urbanity, tive, the Jesuit lost no time in nerve and politeness of the management of the Viceroy, and acquainting this institution is quite "killing," his mission, which was favourably and instead of it being a favour received his attendance at the now-a-days to get a bill renewed, palace, and, on leaning from him or discounted, it is completely the his account of the bank, and its other way. The directors are but befitting effects in the cure of in hand to the customers, searching fever, he resolved that the Indian their books, and asking them to should undergo the same process. pay their bills for another six The strips of the bark months. The latest news about were then boiled, and the bitter town is that the affairs of the decoction was taken by the com Casa de Moneda are about to be pany; and such were its rapid wound up, and the old house and sanitary effects, that the turned into a sort of cursed for fever was cured in the space of insolvent debtors.

"Opposition is the life of trade." Owing to the number of schemers on the river, people who never went to Montevideo before are now making the trip Owing to the number of Banks, people who never had a bill discounted, are beginning to be counted, are beginning discreet. It is a lucky thing for ourselves, as in case our bugbear, the Fiscal, fines us, we know where to look for money on easy terms. Who knows if Mr Agrelo himself doesn't want cash at times, without a second name; or at some future time may take a trip to Montevideo: the fares are low, so it would be an advantage for him.

The capsizing of an omnibus on the Barracas road, owing to its clocking condition, compels us to call the attention of Dr Acosta again to the matter, for he turns a deaf ear to our appeal on behalf of the milkmen, probably he will pay attention to the cries of omnibus passengers, who, not having the fear of the Fiscal before their eyes, made, have an indescribable objection to immediate dissolution. In the gas-house yard there are hundreds of tons of coke ashes, which, but strewn along the roads, would macadamize them.

The Western Railway company have called a meeting, to take into consideration a Government message about the extension to the Villa Mercedes. We hope the directors will pay attention to our repeated suggestions, respecting the construction of cars or trucks, for the carriage of loaded bullock carts. Mr Allen, the engineer and inspector, should be consulted on this matter; we have no doubt that he will coincide with us in our views.

HISTORY OF JESUIT'S BARK.

We have been favored with the subjoined account of this valuable drug, and as its history is not generally known, while associated with this continent, we publish it as of great interest to our readers.—Among the useful discoveries introduced by the Spaniards into Europe, this ranks foremost, and as a Bolivian product, has served humanity more than the boasted mines of that country, that, where nature has raised such an auxiliary to life and health, the people devote themselves to suicidal civil wars.

The Province of la Paz is extremely rich in mineral and vegetable productions. From the forests of Las Yungas, 40 leagues from La Paz, is obtained the Cinchona bark, which was discovered by an Indian, named Pedro Seyza, in 1631. He was a native of Loxa, an corregidor of that village. Whilst suffering from an attack of fever, he crawled and approached his thirst by drinking from a stream impregnated with the bark of that tree, which grew in clusters along its borders, and found relief from its medicinal virtues. He returned to the stream on the following day, and by drinking freely of its bitter waters, was perfectly cured of the fever. Feeling a short time after that he could tell the Corregidor [the Viceroy's lieut.] was suffering from fever, and that he had been despaired of by her medical attendants, he set out, and, coming to the Corregidor's house, closeted with the hope of restoring her to health. Arriving at that city, he called upon a Jesuit, to whom he communicated his fortunate discovery, and the two—Bona cura est bonum opus—

But if the Tribuna has acted in with the bark. Struck with surprise at his important intelligence, the Jesuit lost no time in acquainting the Viceroy, and acquainting him of the Indian's mission, which was favourably and instead of it being a favour received his attendance at the palace, and, on leaning from him his account of the bark, and its befitting effects in the cure of fever, he resolved that the Indian should undergo the same process. The strips of the bark were then boiled, and the bitter decoction was taken by the company; and such were its rapid and sanitary effects, that the fever was cured in the space of three days, to the extraordinary surprise of her medical attendants, and the inexpressible joy of the Viceroy and family.

The fame of this bark spread rapidly abroad, and was known by the name of Los Polvos de la Condesa; it was imported into Europe in the following year, under the name of the Jesuit's Powder. Thus are we indebted to a Peruvian Indian for the most valuable medicine in the cure of fevers, which had hitherto baffled the skill of the physician.

EXPLORATIONS,

Strange it is, but not the less true, that three hundred years have elapsed since the discovery of the River Plate by the brave and unfortunate Solis, and yet the sources of this fine river are unknown, not only to commerce, but even to the science of the world.

It is our purpose to chronicle, with the few facts at our disposal, the audacious exploration of the head waters of the Paraguay by captain Bossi, a work which the Jesuits so great in Paraguay had been unable to effect, by which the great traveller Azara had left untouched and even captain Page, sent out especially by the United States Government gave up for want of adequate means to prosecute with efficacy.

The Nacion Argentina of Thursday publishes the following:

Captain Bossi conceived his project in Cuyaba and started like a brave pioneer, with a small body guard of soldiers from that remote Brazilian frontier establishment: half his troops however took panic and returned home after attaining the head waters of Paraguay.

As yet we have no detailed report or diary of this expedition, but we have good authority for the following information respecting the nature of the countries surveyed; possibly we may be satisfied on this point before long for among the upper sources of the exploring party there was a photographic machine which was made use of with frequency.

The country surveyed (Brazilian and Bolivian territory) abounds with diamonds, gold, silver and copper mines. The woods were so extensive and dense that the expl rers were frequently obliged to make their way by means of the hatchet, and bees so excessively numerous that great cargoes might be shipped of honey and wax alone.

In Zoology the explorers found in greater abundance were the tiger and the monkey which served them for food; the former were timid and fled at their approach, being caught with ease in the woods. The skin of a serpent has been also brought as a relic of the survey, measuring seven yards long and carrying sufficient breadth in breast behind these ferocious animals are less to be feared than the tribes inhabiting the country between the Paraguay and Amazons; they are described as exceedingly ferocious hiding about during the daytime, and like beasts of prey prowling about during night-time spreading everywhere the greatest terror and dismay: our surveyors were more than once obliged to use their rifles with deadly efficacy.

Their arms are very primitive, being arrows dressed in wood of vivid colors and the points made of flints so sharp that the hardest bone is made short work of.

The women are said to wear large bracelets of indian-rubber and instead of earrings, pieces of cane about nine inches long and of the breadth of a common lead pencil. They also use a paste chiefly composed of lime placed inside the lower lip which serves the double purpose of raising the lip and giving an intense black color to the teeth; indispensable qualification of beauty.

Such is the brief sketch of the leading features of the survey; the adventurous travellers have brought with them the skins of wild beasts and specimens of natural productions. We hope they will shortly publish a diary and detailed report of the survey which will be interesting to all for it is new—with the single exception of Azara who did not go so far as they have gone, we know of no explorer who has beaten the same path before, and who can estimate the possible or probable results of such a survey, in a virgin region, one of the most favoured on the face of the globe?

RUFINO DE ELIZALDE.

COTTON FROM MONTE VIDEO.

Among the reports from South America as to the yield of cotton, that from Senor Obes, President of the Commission at Monte Video for the International Exhibition, states that the cotton plant grows wild throughout the country, and, though often stripped of its bark by animals grazing, still continues to flourish and yield. It has never been systematically cultivated, but even in its wild state it has shown such extraordinary vigour and productiveness that if proper methods were adopted, and a little care bestowed on its cultivation, there can be certain to yield very profitable returns. The cost per bag price of cotton has stimulated the commencement of cultivation in Monte Video in a regular way, and a more opportune time than the present could not occur for the purpose. The occupation would be wholly in the hands of foreigners, as the natives are so inured to sheep and cattle breeding, that they generally prove supine and careless in availing themselves of any new branch of industry.

GARIBALDI.—Dr. Partridge has written a report of his visit to Garibaldi and expresses his high satisfaction with the treatment adopted by the Italian physicians. The wound on the thigh has healed, but that on the ancle will not be cured for some months. Should the patient continue to have due care and comfort he will have a useful foot, though the ancle joint may be still.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

NAPOLEON'S FORCE AT WATERLOO.—Napoleon, with Ney Loban—reduced to two divisions—the Guard, Milhaud's cuirassiers and Subervie's division, taken from Lobel, had about 50,000 men. This number, considering the superior quality of his troops, could have been sufficient to defeat the English had not a great error of a great misfortune compelled him to fight two armies.—Thiers.

RAILWAYS IN THE RIVER PLATE.—It does not quite agree with you at all events in thinking the time of the Rosario and Cordova Railway so distant for I know it is a matter in which Mare takes great interest, for he believes, as every one out here does that it would be a salvation of the country,—the best security for peace, —and the most effectual and in developing the interior resources of the country. Catamarca, now they are working prolific copper mines, and at San Juan, silver mines of rich promise have been lately examined and reported favourably by an able engineer. But I depend more on the judicious resources of the soil from cultivation than upon any mineral products, the exertion to make this a great country, and until we have railways, our exertions are of rather a small compass. I have not the slightest doubt, from what I see here, and a journey of three weeks to a month for a distance that a railway could accomplish in ten or twelve hours.—Extract from a private letter from Rosario. (River Plate.)

—Messrs. Mason and Slidell have communicated to the French press that they have no official knowledge whatever of their recall to Richmond which has been rumoured. The Pays hears from a "very good source" that nothing is more likely than that the recognition of the South on the "basis of accomplished facts" will very soon be on the tapis. England and France acting in concert.

LOCAL EVENTS.

NEW HERALD. It is regretted that Rosas intends to publish the list of the Unitarists, previous to the coming out Spanish author Modesto Lapouche.

This must be a canard, however cynic Rosas may be, we do not think him capable of setting a retrospect of the Governor-ship.

IMMIGRANTS 50 arrived yesterday from Bayonne per French Aviso.

REPRESENTATIVE QUESTION. We are well pleased to state that the vexed question of representation at Montevideo is in a fair way of arrangement by the resignation of Drs. Velez Sarsfield and Costa, ministers of the late

NEW BANK. We publish in another column the advertisement or prospectus of the new Buenos Ayres commercial Bank with a capital of 600,000 hard dollars

From the establishment of two new banks with large capital, we may expect a decline in the rate of interest, which will bring property again into better repute.

THE ENGLISH PRESS. has been publishing a series of extracts on the wheat and silk culture in the Republic of the Uruguay.

PIRATES. Three men on board a small canoe, have been assaulting vessels on the Paraná river. They have wounded the crew of schooner Union on the voyage from San Nicolas to Paraná, and sacked the vessel.

We trust the authorities will not let this pass over without serious investigation and punishment of the offenders, for it is the commencement of a new species of crime hitherto unpractised in the country.

MR RAOUL LEGOUT. Director of our principal school, and also one of the members of the artesian water company, has given up his first appointment, as to devote himself entirely to the latter.
